P R E F A C E

ON the occasion of the visitation of the Cambrian Archæological Society to Cardigan, in August 1904, I was asked to read a paper on the Priory of Cardigan before the Society. In searching for information thereon I came on so much that was interesting, and that would have taken far too long to read during the time limit allowed for the paper, that I was asked to publish it, that those who are interested in such things may also read them. I owe, first of all, thanks to the Rev. D. H. Davies, Vicar of Verwig and Mount, for to him I owe the first knowledge of the grants of James I.'s reign, at the Record Office ; then I know not whether I owe him thanks or the reverse for the following, as the result has been a long and laborious search, and the burning of much midnight oil ; it

CHAPTER I

A.D. 450

THE earliest mention to be found, as regards religion in Cardigan, is the settlement there of St. Mathaiarn,* son of Brychan, son of an Irishman named Aulach, the son of Cormac, sometimes called Rullech Goronog (the Crown Wearing), King of Ireland, Brychan's mother being† Marcella (or Marchell), only daughter‡ of Teudrig, King of Garth Madryn (now called Brecknock).§ Brychan's three wives,|| according to an ancient MS. copied about the year 1670, by Thomas Evan, of the Brynn, in the parish of Llangrallo, were, first, Brawst; second, Rhybrawst; third, Eurbrawst; but according to the Truman MS. his wives were Rhybrawst, Eurbrawst, and Prosori, the latter and third wife coming from Spain. St. Mathaiarn settled in Cardigan in the middle of the fifth century; his sister, Meleri, or Eleri, who was also sometimes called Helen, married Ceredig, son of Cunedda Wledig (Wledig signifying Emperor, or Overlord), and was mother of Sandde, the father of Saint David. From Ceredig we obtain the name of Cardigan. Ceredig and Meleri also had a son, Ithael, whose son, Dogfael, became a saint, and living on the south bank of the River Teify, one mile west of Cardigan, gave his name to the present village of Saint Dogmaels. Ceredig* took delight in civil war, and was hated by God and the Britons; he was driven by Gormandus west of the Severn, and settled in Cambria, and became the founder of Cardigan† expelling the foreigner from the country of Tyno Goch, and giving the name of Ceredigion to the cantref. The second son of Brychan, Cyvlewyr,‡ was slain by the Saxons in Ceredigion, and buried there. In all probability St. Mathaiarn settled in Cardigan to be near his sister; and established, according to the custom of those days in Wales, a religious house there. In many old MSS. and also in the Myvyrian Archaeology, the Iolo MS., &c., we find that he died, and was buried in Cardigan, so that, in all probability, the old religious house of St. Mathaiarn stood on the same ground on which the later Priory of the Benedictines was built, the monks in olden times generally selecting these ancient British Religious Houses for their Abbeys and Priories.

‡ A MS. of the year 900 states that Marchell, Teudrig's daughter, went to Ireland, and married Aulech, the King of Ireland, and later returned to Wales with her son Brychan.

That Brychan was well known outside this little island is gathered from "Bonedd y Saint Neu Achau Saint Ynis Prydain," which mentions, among fourteen of his sons and daughters who entered religion :—

Arthen, buried in the Isle of Man, and who, according to Truman's MS. had a Church dedicated to him in Gwentllwyg, which was afterwards demolished by the Pagan Saxons ;

Rhain was a saint who lived in Lincolnshire, and had a Church dedicated to him in the Isle of Man ;

Dygnan, buried at Llandfynan, in Anglesea. The account of this son varies slightly in the Iolo MS. his Church is there stated to be in Anglesea, but that he lies buried in Ireland ;

Cadawc, in France, the Iolo MS. give more as to Cadawc or Cadoc, adding that he had a Church in Llangadog, in Ystrad Towy (vale of Towy), that he was made Bishop by Dyvig his brother, and went to France, where he lies buried ;

4 CARDIGAN PRIORY

Gerwyn, or Berwyn, was slain in Ynis Gerwyn. His Church is in Cornwall ;

Pascen went to Spain with his two brothers, Neffei and Pabiali, the sons of Brychan, by his third wife, Prosori, who came from Spain, and Neffei and Pabiali there became legislators ("pennrhaithau"), all three were afterwards enrolled among the saints of Spain.

(An ancient tombstone in Twyn Church, in Merioneddshire, is inscribed PASC<sub>NT</sub>.)

Dyvid was Confessor to Germanus, the son of Rigidius, and was principal of his College in Llancarvan, and afterwards Bishop of Llandaff. His mother was Eurbrawst, daughter of Meryvig, son of Teudrig, King of Garth Madryn ;

Nevydd, his church is Llannevydd, in the uplands of Rhyvoniog, N. Wales ; afterwards he was a Bishop of North Britain, where he was slain by the pagan Saxons and the Picts.

Keyma and Nennoe, daughters of Brychan, were also both saints, their lives are most fully recorded, and are very interesting. St. Keyma was a nun at the place now called Keynsham, in Somersetshire, later on she returned to Abergavenny, in South Wales, and died there. St. Nennoe,* the youngest daughter of Brychan, and probably also of Proseri, with some difficulty obtained the consent of her parents, and crossed to Brittany, accompanied by her godparents, and other people. The King Guerch, of Brittany, gave her lands, and ample provision of wheat, wine and animals, for the large convent she founded in his dominions. The Charter is dated 548, and is copied in Latin and French by Albert le Grand, who wrote in 1616, and gathered all his information for the life of St. Nennoe from the archives of the Abbaye of Sainte Croix de Kemper-Elle (Quimperle, France.) St. Nennoe died in 467, during the reign of Hoël the Great. The place where she lived was called Landt Nennok, Plouemeur. Brychan also had a daughter,* Mechell. She was the first wife of Gynyr, of Caer-Gawch, and the mother of Nonn, the mother of St. David.

From this one sees that the family of Brychan were of repute, and known in England, Wales, Ireland, the Isle of Man, France, and Spain ; therefore St. Mathaiarn would, in all probability, be a well known man, and his religious house at Cardigan would also be well known ; and though at this distance of time one cannot pierce the veil of the past as to the exact site of St. Mathaiarn's religious house, probability points strongly to its site being one with that of the Benedictine Monastery or later years.

Now, alas ! owing to the terrible destruction of archives and MSS. owing to negligence, ignorance, and fire, many hundreds of years pass before any mention of this Priory is found.

CHAPTER II

A.D. 1066-1164

SO far the founder* and the date of the foundation,* remain behind the veil, as both its annals, and most of those of its parent, Chertsey, appear to have been destroyed in the time of Henry VIII.

Chertsey Abbey, to which Cardigan Priory was a Cell, was founded by St. Erconwald in 660, but was afterwards rebuilt, and granted by King Edgar in 964 to the Black Monks of St. Benedict ; they possessed great wealth, owning twenty-five manors and lands in Surrey, Hants, Berks, and Cardiganshire,

The first date we have of the existence of this Priory is in 1164,*—when Rhys ap Gryffydd, Prince of South Wales, conquered Cardigan, and brought it again under Welsh rule, and by a grant confirmed the gift of the then existing Priory Cell of Cardigan to the Black Monks of St. Benedict, of the Abbey of Chertsey. This limits the date of its foundation to before 1164. It is a well known fact that monks were the reverse of popular among the Welsh; therefore, it would be most unlikely for this Priory to have been founded by any of the early Welsh Princes.

The ancient windows of this Priory, of which seven are still in existence, point to a period between 1066 and 1125

The date of the first advent of the Normans into Cardiganshire was, as history tells us, in 1070-72, when they, owing to the treachery of Caradawg,* ravaged Ceredigion and Dyved (the present Pembrokeshire). In 1073 Rhydderch ap Caradawg appears to have been victorious, and to have acquired the sovereignty of South Wales. The years following this were spent in the most unhappy civil warfare in South Wales, till in 1077 Rhys ap Tewdwr established himself as Prince of South Wales, until his death in 1090, when, at the advanced age of ninety-eight† he was killed fighting against the Normans, near the Black Mountains in Breconshire.

Meanwhile, in 1087 or 1088, Martine de Tours‡ as he is called, or Martinus Turonensis, landed at Fishguard, advanced through Pembrokeshire with his forces, conquering as he advanced, till finally the Welsh, instead of making an united stand, yielded to him one village after another, preferring to make peace with him, than to stand alone against him ; until he came to St. Dogmaels, on the banks of the River Teify, one mile west of Cardigan, on the opposite bank, where his son,* Roger Fitz-Martin, carried out a plan of his father's, and built the Abbey of St. Dogmaels, two miles from the site of an old monastery, which had been pillaged by the Danes in 987, during one of their raids. Bernard,† Bishop of St. David's, who died 1141, was a witness to the deed of this foundation of the Abbey, by Robert Fitz-Martin. Some old writers place Martin's death in 1089, if this is correct he probably had no time to build an Abbey. He built Nevern Castle, and this would probably be his first‡ work. Robert Fitz-Martin afterwards endowed this Abbey of St. Dogmaels, giving it to the Benedictines, and sending to the Abbey of Thiron-Gardais (founded, 1109) near Nogent le Rotrou, Eure et Loire, France, for the first Abbot, named Fulchardus. These monks of the order of Thiron, or Tironensis, were reformed Benedictines. There has been much dispute as to which of the four "Tours" in France Martin belonged—Tours, near Bayeux, and Tours in Turraine claiming the most adherents. Is it not likely this doubt has arisen from mis-spelling in the first instance? Martinus Turonensis being very slightly different from Martinus Tironensis, and the writing of an "u" for an "i" an easy slip to make in those days of indifferent spelling. Added to this the fact that when the Abbey of St. Dogmaels was finished, Martin's son sent to Tiron for the first Abbot; might not Tiron have been, perchance, his father's old home? Also this Tiron was on the borders of Normandy. The people of Cardigan probably were more or less friendly to Martin's followers, as one finds Robert Fitz-Martin's son married to Angharad, daughter of Rhys ap Gryffydd, it might have been from motives of policy, that it was better to have the Martins for friends than for enemies. Apparently Cardigan itself remained in the hands of the Welsh till 1092, when the Normans landed in Cardiganshire, and began to fortify themselves in castles and other strong places, and to inhabit the country upon the sea shore; and one finds Roger Montgomery, Earl of Arundel, did homage to King William II. of England, for the Lordships of Powys and Cardigan, though one finds no trace of his ever having lived in Cardigan; he was slain by the Welsh in 1094. In 1093 the Welsh rose under the command of Gryffydd ap Conan, Prince of North Wales, and Cadwgan ap Bleddyn, Prince of Powys,

CARDIGAN PRIORY 11

and defeated the Normans.* Cadwgan marched triumphantly through Cardiganshire, destroying all the castles and fortifications erected by the Normans, and from this date Cardigan town and Castle remained for some years in the hands of the Welsh. In 1094 or 1097, old histories vary as to this date, Cadwgan, having rebuilt the Castle on a greatly extended scale, took up his residence there;† and in 1107, after vast preparations, and invitations having been sent throughout Great Britain, and the greater part of Europe, nearly a year in advance, Cadwgan gave an enormous banquet and festival, lasting the greater part of the Christmas Holidays. Malkin states‡ that in the year 1093, Cadwgan ap Blethin, indignant at the intrusion of the Normans, with the assistance of Gruffyth ap Conan, fell desperately on the new settlers, routed their forces in several engagements, and dismantled all the castles they had built, except two. But they were not uniformly successful, and were at length obliged to make peace, and accede to the claims of the invaders, by relinquishing a part of their own inheritances. In this new arrangement, the town and Castle of Cardigan remained with Cadwgan ap Blethin. The foundation of this Castle is generally attributed to Gilbert de Clare, in the reign of Henry the Second. He probably rebuilt it ; but it appears clearly from these documents that there had been a fortress here for at least seventy years preceding ; nor is it likely that the Normans on their first landing would have neglected an important station near the sea, so necessary to their safety, whether they maintained themselves in the country, or were compelled to retire. This Castle has been richly distinguished in the annals of the bards. It was here that Rees ap Gruffyth held that pompous celebration of the Stethra,* mentioned in the first chapter. Nor was this the only instance. So long before as the Christmas of 1107, Cadwgan ap Blethin instituted a similar festival, of which some account will be given hereafter, before this period, when the Castle is alleged to have been built. The entertainment did not yield in splendour to that of Rees ap Gruffyth ; and that consequently this palace and fortress must even then have possessed considerable extent and accommodation, as well as strength, and its owner have attained no mean degree of courtly and political importance. It does not appear why Gilbert de Clare should, at this distance of time, be denominated the founder, since there not only was an earlier Castle, but the present remains are of a more modern date than Cadwgan, Gilbert, or Rees ap Gruffyth. In the year 1220, we read that "Lhwelin ap Jorwerth levelled the Castle of Aber-tivy, or Cardigan, to the ground."

In the year 1107 Gilbert Strongbow, Earl of Strigull, received a grant of all the lands of Cardigan from Henry I., if he could conquer them; he evidently partly achieved this, as he built two Castles, one at Llanbadern, on the Ystwith, and the other at Cilgerran (in Pembrokeshire) on the River Teify. Cadwgan, however, appears to have retained possession of Cardigan till between 1108 and 1112, when one finds Cardigan also in the possession of Gilbert Strongbow,* Earl of Clare and Strigull till his death in 1114.† In 1135 Gryffydd ap Rhys ap Teudwr, who claimed to be lord of Cardigan, attacked Stephen, Governor of Cardigan Castle, but was not successful in his attempt to capture it. From 1135 to 1157 one finds the Normans and † The Brut y Tywysogion states that he died in 1114 "of a long languishment and illness." Various other old documents also place Gilbert's death at 1114. The Brut y Tywysogion also states that Cadwgan's death took place before a certain event, which occurred in 1109.—E. M. P.

Flemings conjointly in possession, when it was granted to Roger de Clare, son of Gilbert, by the King, if he could win it. Gilbert Strongbow resided, chiefly, at Cardiff Castle,* and made a Norman, named Stephen, Governor of Cardigan, who was succeeded in the Governorship, on his death, by his son, Robert Fitz-Stephen.† Roger de Clare held it from 1157 to 1164, when all Cardigan was recovered from him by Rhys ap Gryffydd.

By this one sees that the only Normans who had any rights over Cardigan were Robert Montgomery, for under two years, though there is no record of his ever having lived there ; and Gilbert de Clare, till 1135 ; and Roger de Clare, 1157 to 1164, their Castellans being Stephen and his son. This limits the number of likely founders to Martinus Tironensis, or his son, who, one sees, were connected with the Benedictines, and Gilbert de Clare, or his Castellan, Stephen. If either of the two latter then the foundation must have been between 1108 to 1112 and 1125.

ADDENDUM TO CHAPTER II

A.D. 1111-1175

SINCE the writing of Chapter II. fresh material has come to hand at Cardiff Central Free Library in the "History and Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter's of Gloucester" by Wm. Henry Hart. In this one finds the grant of Llanbadarn and Holy Trinity of Cardigan to the Abbey of Gloucester by Gilbert de Clare.* The date assigned by Mr. Hart to this charter is 1115-1147, but in the "Calendar

* The Brut-y-Tywysogion states that Gilbert de Clare died in 1114 of a lingering illness, therefore his grant of Llanbadarn and Cardigan Priors to the Abbey of Gloucester must have been before that date, and probably about 1111, as stated in the footnote to Hart's "Hist. et Cart. Gloucestriae."

In another Brut I find that William (? Gilbert) de Clare died of a lingering consumption in 1116.

Also the Brut-y-Tywysogion mentions Cadwgan's murder by his nephew Madoc occurred after 1107 and before a certain event which took place in 1109.

The Brut Ievan Brechfa gives an interesting account of how the Saxons in 860 broke down all the Churches and Monasteries in Gwent, Gower, Demetia and Ceredigion (Cardigan).

This Brut also states that Bernard was Bishop of St. Davids in 1112.—E. M. P.

16 CARDIGAN PRIORY

of Donations" this grant is stated to have been made in 1111. This latter date is more probably correct, as Gilbert de Clare built both the Castles of Llanbadarn and Cilgerran in 1107,* and would probably establish Llanbadarn Priory on the completion of Llanbadarn Castle, or soon after (by 1111). As Prince Cadwgan died between 1108 and 1109, Gilbert de Clare probably built the Priory of Cardigan about the same time; also later on one finds a grant of King Henry, confirming this gift of Llanbadarn and Cardigan to Gloucester, with the same date (1115 to 1147). Now Henry I. died in 1135, and Henry II. did not begin to reign till 1154, therefore it must have been Henry I. who confirmed this gift, and prior to 1135. Gilbert de Clare† also died, according to the Bruts, in 1114, therefore this grant must have been previous to 1114.

We already know that Rhys ap Gryffyth conquered Cardigan in 1164, the then existing Priory, the Castle, and the town, and drove out the followers

* According to some old historians, Cardigan was granted to him by the King at that date, and the Castles were built the same year.

† Vide Woodward's "History of Wales," vol. i. p. 262. Richard FitzGilbert, Earl of Clare, was killed, April 1136, with nearly all his train by the Welsh. Warrington's "History of Wales," p. 291, gives 1135 for Richard's murder. Humphrey Lhoyd's "Historie of Cambria," 1584, p. 138, states that "Richard and Gilbert (de Clare) his sonne were slain by the Welsh, 1135."

CARDIGAN PRIORY 17

of the de Clares. Apparently he sent away the Gloucester monks then holding the Priory, probably fearing they would plot for the return of the de Clares, their founders, if he allowed them to remain. In the adjudication of David Bishop of St. David's 1175, on the case of the Llanbadarn dispute, it is mentioned of the Church of Llanbadarn that, "in the unsettled state of the time certain people took it from them (the Abbot and monks of Gloucester) and having taken it, for some length of time unjustly retained," &c. This undoubtedly refers to the conquest of Rhys ap Gryffydd in 1164.

The next one learns is that Rhys had granted this existing Priory Cell to Chertsey, and not content with taking away this Priory Cell from Gloucester, and giving it to Chertsey, he even changed its patron Saint, for whereas in the de Clares' time it was dedicated to the Trinity, Rhys now dedicates it to St. Mary, why we know not. It certainly was not through antipathy to the de Clares, as later we find him dining in England, seated between Roger de Clare (Gilbert's brother) and his son, and on being joked on the subject of his holding the estates of those sitting next him at the table, the de Clares replied that as they could not hold Cardigan, they were glad Rhys had it, as he was a right good fellow.

Accordingly have carefully inquired into and discovered the truth, as well from their authentic writings submitted to us by their brothers John and Phillip, as from the unanimous attestation of all our Chapter, since the same Church by right appertained to the Monastery of the already named brothers.

The same Church with all its appurtenances we having convoked our Chapter at St. Davids have adjudged to the aforesaid Monastery of Gloucester.

IN 1164 Rhys ap Gryffyd, Lord of Cardigan, besieged Cardigan Castle,* which being surrendered he destroyed, allowing all the soldiers and inhabitants to go out free, carrying all their possessions with them, keeping only the Governor, Fitz Stephen, a prisoner. He also conquered the Priory and the whole town. The Castle he rebuilt shortly, for in the grant of the then existing Priory Cell of Cardigan to Chertsey he grants to it tithes on the food and drinks, &c., used in the Castle, &c. A copy of this grant of Prince Rhys is :

In the Patent Roll 3 Henry VI. (written in 1424 Latin and Norman French) Henry VI. states he had inspected letters patent of his father, Henry V., made when he was Prince of Wales, who in his turn states that he had inspected letters patent of Richard, Resus filius Griffini princeps Walliae, etc. (as in Pat. R. 3 Hen. VI. Part I., m. 13, 22 Nov. 1424).

In 1176 Prince Rhys gave a magnificent entertainment at Cardigan Castle, having issued invitations one year before, and sending to all the known countries of Europe, inviting their chivalry and their troubadours to an Eisteddfod, or musical competition. Old writers say that 30,000 came in response to his invitation. There is no doubt that this old Castle was far more extensive then than at the present day, and stretched West to what is now called the "Mwldan," this name being derived from an old Welsh word "Mwl" (the concreted mass) and "tan" or "dan" (under), therefore proving that the old Castle walls extended along the ridge, above the present "Mwldan." They were still reported by a visitor, to Cardigan, in 1750 to have been standing at that date.

Before proceeding further, an interesting corroborative fact as to the invasion of the Danes (also proving that they probably came as far as the present Cardigan Bridge, the old Bridge having been about 200 yards further up the river at the place at present known as the old Ferry, opposite Gloucester Row) is found in some skulls which were dug up some years ago, when rebuilding a house, which skulls * had been cleft by battle axes, and belonged, probably, to some of those who had fought against the Danes in their raids of 987, 989, or 1071.

In 1188 * Prince Rhys ap Gryffydd entertained Archbishop Baldwin of Canterbury, and his train, and Giraldus Cambrensis; when Archbishop Baldwin was journeying through Wales, preaching the third Crusade. The first night Prince Rhys entertained them at St. Dogmael's Abbey, and Archbishop Baldwin preached the next day on the Pembrokeshire side of the river, near the end of the old Bridge which crossed the River, opposite to the Priory Church of St. Mary's, the engine house for the engines of the G. W. Railway at Cardigan Station now stands on the site of this old Church. The old ordnance survey marked the field as "Parc y Capel" (the Church field), and the cottage standing there prior to the engine house was called "Capel Sidan," implying that the Church had been a circular Church. The next night Archbishop Baldwin and his train were entertained by Prince Rhys at Cardigan Castle, Cardigan Priory being far too small to hold such a crowd.

Giraldus Cambrensis writes, 1188, Vol. II., p. 55 : "Cardigan contained only one small Priory of Black Monks of the Benedictine Order, a cell unto the Abbey of Chertsey."

CHAPTER V

A.D. 1501-1535-6

ELAND, librarian to Henry VIII., in his "Itinerary," Vol. V., p. 10, states: "There is a Priori in Cardigan Toune, but in it was but II Religiose Menne Blak Monkes, it stondith yet, and is a Cell unto Chertsey."

Camden, in his "Britannia," translated by Gough, 1607, Vol. II., p. 528, writes of the Church as large and handsome, and contiguous to it are the ruins of a Priory of Black Monks, Cell to Chertsey.

Henry Boswell in his "Antiquities of England and Wales"* mentions that "there was formerly a Priory of Black Monks adjoining the Castle, subordinate to Chertsey." Old maps and pictures show the Priory grounds and buildings extending along the river banks to the Castle, and some of the cottages are still standing that belonged to the Priory,† one having an old oak banister rail to the staircase. has the reputation of being the house where the Bishops of St. Davids lived when they came to Cardigan.

In an early map of Cardigan, 1599, the Priory Church is represented as cruciform in shape, and in a large Dutch folio map of Cardiganshire, 1646, by Blaeu, the Priory Church is not only represented as cruciform, but with a chapel adjoining the north side, this probably would be the Chantry Chapel of Sir John ap Jevan, mentioned in the Chantry Certificate of 1547-8.

This map is also identical with a map in the fourth vol. of Aerdryck's "Beschryving, Welch Vervat Engelandt," printed at Amsterdam by Johannem Blaeu, 1648.

In another map of Cardiganshire, from Camden, Wilson edit. 1607, Cardigan is simply represented by three towers, signifying a corporation, and the road is shown leading straight to the Church from the old Bridge, which crossed the River nearly opposite to the West End of St. Mary's Church.

Speed also, 1610, has an old map of Cardigan, but not so good.

Some people having started a foolish tale that the Priory, Cardigan, was part of the dower of Katherine of Aragon, it may be well to insert here a copy of the Assignment of Dower to Katherine of Aragon, by Arthur, Prince of Wales, son of Henry VII.,

In the Cotton MS., Cleopatra E. IV., Folio 118, there is the interesting account of the examination of Prior Hore, relative to the Lady of the Burning Taper, and in it is the first mention of Christ's Church in Cardigan. To the present day in Cardigan there is the story handed down of the Virgin with the taper, but with the addition that Queen Elizabeth ordered it to be thrown into the River Teify; a search at the Record Office among the State and Domestic Papers of Queen Elizabeth does not produce anything in support of this addition to Henry VIII.'s orders. According to this examination of Prior Hore the taper evidently was opened then.

In the Patent Roll (1869), 8 James I, Part 31, No. 3, is a reference to the "College" of Cardigan. Meyrick also refers to the "College" of Cardigan Patron Saint April 25th (St. Mark).

Several old maps and pictures of Cardigan also mark the "College" in the Priory Grounds. This has reference to the Benedictines following, amongst the various avocations of their order, the calling of teachers, and having a college for the instruction of the youth of the neighbourhood.

CHAPTER IX

A.D. 1610-1695

WILLIAMS, in his "Parliamentary History of the Principality of Wales" (1895), states that James Philipps, b. 1594, of Terragibby and Cardigan Priory, eldest son of George of Tregibby (vide grant of 1616, p.30, etc.)

1610
(aged 16)

Married, 1st to Frances, daughter of Sir R. Picton, Bt., of Picton, Pem.

1647

„ 2nd to Katherine, daughter of John Fowler, a wealthy merchant of London.

„ 3rd to Anne, daughter of Sir R. Rudd, Bt., of Abergasney, Co. Carmarthen.

His second wife, Katherine, was the celebrated Orinda, authoress of the "Letters to Poliarchus" (Sir Chas. Cotterell), a volume of poems, and of several plays. Four of her letters to Poliarchus, in 1662, were written from the Priory. A letter of hers in 1663 to Poliarchus announces his election as M.P.

for Cardigan, through the influence of her husband.
The letter is as follows :*

“ Give me leave, Sir, to tell you what I know you have heard from Antenor already, that he intreats you to accept of an Election to be Burgess for the town of CARDIGAN, which he would not mention to you till 'twas past, because he was resolv'd not to expose you to a Repulse ; nor had you ever been nam'd but that he found himself able to carry it for you against all the World. You are chosen upon the Poll by 118 Votes, all of them allow'd by our Antagonists themselves to have right to elect. If any of the other Party should endeavour to insinuate that they quietly submitted to it, merely out of respect to you, pray let them know, that you are sufficiently inform'd, they did all they could to oppose you, and that it was carry'd purely by ANTENOR'S single Interest. I hope all those who were the greatest Sticklers against him will now be convinced that after all their Contrivences to asperse his Person and baffle the Election, he is not yet the despicable thing in his own Country that they would represent him to be. He hopes you will not despise this little Instance, since 'tis all his Misfortunes have left him capable to give, of his Esteem and Gratitude to you ; for whom I am certain he has as profound a Respect and Veneration as for any man living. I know you are not fond of being a Parliament Man ; yet since you are elected so much without your seeking, that I am sure it was not so much as thought of by you ; and since it was intended as a Testimony to the eternal Value and Friendship that ANTENOR and ORINDA must ever have for the noble POLIARCHUS, I hope he will not be angry to be sent into the House without his own Consent, or Knowledge. The Truth is, ANTENOR and myself always intended it, but were not willing to tell you so, till we saw what Forces our Enemies were like to muster up against us ; and had they been likely to have been too powerful for ANTENOR to cope with, your Name had never been mention'd : But when he saw the Affections of the Town so unanimous for him, he recommended you to them as a Person fit to be their Representative in Parliament ; and as I am inform'd by some who heard him, made a very handsome Speech in the Face of the Country, and declared himself in such a manner as became a Gentleman, who neither could fear his Enemies, nor abandon his Country's Services. Since you have this Relation to a place where our little Fortune and Interest lies, I hope it will be a new Tie in our Friendship and that ANTENOR will by this means have sometimes the Honour of hearing from you, which I know he will value as from the Man whose

Acquaintance he most covets. And if any happy Providence make an Overture for our coming near you, he may then contract that Intimacy with you, which next to my own Happiness in your Conversation, which is now become necessary to the Satisfaction of my Life, is one of my most aspiring Wishes in this World. But now you are a Member of Parliament, love be to you for Letters; for if possible, I will increase that Persecution, since you will have but half the Inconvenience of them to excuse, I mean, the Trouble, not the Charges. And to say Truth I have mightly considered those two Points, have I not? ROSANIA was not so good as her word, in letting me hear from her by the Post you told me I should, and pray tell her I am scarce in Charity with her, for being so very a Recreant as never to be constant in maintaining a Correspondence, on which she knows I set so high a Value. You see, dear POLIARCHUS, that when I am writing to you, I never know when to leave off; I am sure I have tir'd you with this Scribble, which asks your Patience only till it has told you that no body in all the World is more faithfully your Friend than, &c.

His brother Hector Phillips lived at the Priory after Col. Phillips' death, and was M.P. for the boro' of Cardigan in 1679 and died in 1693. panel. The silver handle of the larger is inscribed as follows :—"Domum Jacobi Phillipps de Tregibby in Comitatu Cardigan Armigeri Dedit burgo Cardigan An<sup>n</sup> domi 1647." Both maces were the gift of Col. Phillipps, and tradition says were given to him by Cromwell. They have no arms of the town or crest of the Phillips' upon them, and undoubtedly belonged to Charles I. 1647 is evidently the date of their presentation. The first view of them suggests the idea of drinking cups with their bases cut off and ebony handles affixed instead. It was probably shortly after Col. Phillipps presented these to the town that he married his second wife, the Matchless Orinda as she is called, and removed to the Priory. She was born in 1631, and died at the early age of 33. Amongst her friends were Sir C. Cottrell, Jeremy Taylor, Dryden, Cowley, Lord Roscommon, &c. Col. Phillipps was one of the six Welshmen summoned to Barebones' Parliament. The last entry of his name in the books of the Corporation of Cardigan was on January 20, 1672. He was descended from Sir Thomas Phillips,* Knt., of Picton Castle, Pembrokeshire. Three years after the election of Sir Charles Cottrell as M.P. for the Borough of Cardigan one finds entered in the books of the Corporation of Cardigan the copy of a letter

Sir

I have so fresh a remembrance of y<sup>e</sup> obligacon I have to yo<sup>u</sup> and by yo<sup>r</sup> favour to the Borrow of Cardigan that I think my self ingaged to give yo<sup>u</sup> some account of our transactions in the parl<sup>t</sup> when any-thing passes where yo<sup>u</sup> have a particular Conserne. Our late sessions have by reason of prorogations, been so ineffectuall, that there was nothing found in them att all, & the opp'tunities I had of giving yo<sup>r</sup> brother Hector, then in Towne, by whome yo<sup>u</sup> were fully informed of all that passed, as I was also of yo<sup>r</sup> health & the welfare of yo<sup>r</sup> Towne which I much wish, makes me think it the less necessary to give yo<sup>u</sup> this kinde of Trouble. But not having seene him in London this Winter, nor had any other means to heare of yo<sup>u</sup>, my desire to know how yo<sup>u</sup> doe, as well as to informe yo<sup>u</sup> what wee are doing, is the cause of these lines. I know you will heare by common report as much as I can write, for all things in agitation are publique enough, but being trusted with yo<sup>r</sup> purses, I think when wee open them you may expect to heare of that from me. The King in his Speech pressed a Supply, to take off some anticipations uppon the revenue & for the building of Shipps, the former part is utterly denied, and for the other wee have after many long debates, found it absolutely necessary to doe something and therefore have last night finished the resolve of giving eighteene months tax (at the fourth parte of the last for 120000<sup>l</sup>) to make up the sume of 300000<sup>l</sup> for the building of 20 Shipps of the first, second and third rank, & towards the furnishing them with guns. The time of first payment will not be known till the Bill be brought in, which will shortly be p<sup>e</sup>pared, and will appointe the money so to that use, that it may not be diverted to any other. The question was whether this money should be raised by land tax or subsidie; Mr. Vaughan & I were for the latter. But upon division of the Comittee of the whole house, the land tax carried it. But with this vote to make amende, that there shal be no inord. money given for any other occasion this session—so that now you know the worst wee shall doe; And I hope you shall also finde (if the Lords disturb us not by renewing the old dispute) that wee shall get some Bills assented to

In 1669 the Exchequer of Pleas Plea Roll gives a curious account of John Hardy, who held the Priory on lease for 36 years, together with a full list of its lands and appurtenances, and thereby shows that Col. James Phillipps had given up living at the Priory then. In 1663 Orinda writes from there, and in 1675 Sir Charles Cottrell addresses a letter to him

Davies of the town of Cardigan to reap and harvest the said corn and to mow the grass and convert it into hay and afterwards to sell and dispose of the said corn and hay to Orator's best advantage, for which said agent did agree with said John Davies to pay a considerable sum for his pains. Said John Davies in pursuance of agreement did reap and cut down the corn and grass, and sold the same to persons unknown to Orator for one hundred pounds and upwards, which he ought to have paid to Orator. Now said Davies refuses to state how much the corn and hay were worth and to give satisfaction for the same.

He therefore prays for the king's writ of Subpoena under the seal of the Court to be directed to said John Davies to appear and answer the premises.

Hector Phillipps also lived at the Priory after his brother's death till 1695. Hector Phillipps is often mentioned during this period as of the Priory, and yet we have mention in the Pleas Court Roll of John Hardy residing there during that time, and inheriting it in 1681 for a term of 36 years. Then in the Corporation Books for several years we see an Edward Phillipps, Esq., who was sometimes Mayor sometimes Coroner, and who was probably a son of Hector Phillipps. At what date it passed into the hands of the Pryces of Gogerthan there is no trace.

sent window in Cardigan Church, of the early perpendicular period, was probably put up in remembrance of Archbishop Baldwin preaching the Crusade, as among the few ancient pieces of glass remaining after the removal by Col. Johns are the "arms of Canterbury," placed wrong side upwards in the window; tradition has it that a "cardinal in his robes" was represented in this window; perchance it may have been the Archbishop himself, as the arms of Canterbury are still left, and that in the descent of the story from father to son the word "Cardinal" may have been substituted for "Archbishop"; this same tradition also states "the crimson colouring in the window was very fine"—and probably this tradition is correct, as it is little over 120 years since this window was taken away from the Church.

Supporting the old chancel arch on the north side is a crowned female head, wearing beneath the crown the headdress only in vogue during the reign of Henry VI. This proves conclusively that it is the head of his Queen, Margaret of Anjou, who was much beloved by the Welsh, and who, for several years, took refuge in Wales with various devoted adherents of the Lancastrians.

Supporting the south side of the old chancel arch is a very curious and interesting head. It is that of a man, with a fine profile, the forefinger of his right hand pointing to his right eye; in ecclesias-

To return to this head in Cardigan Church, the second finger of the right hand is pulling the corner of the mouth back, usually regarded as the symbol for sneering; this in its entirety probably belonged to some episode in the life of the founder of the present chancel. Perhaps some of the people of that day had been taking notice of the churchmen, so that he has caused himself to be represented as sneering at those who were so bold.

There was a covered way from the Priory to the Church of St. Mary, with an entrance therein by a small door in the south-east corner of the chancel, which door is still there, though now walled in on the outside.

The Priory Garden used to extend from the end of the greenhouse to the present south porch of St. Mary's, and this portion is still called "yr ben ardd" (the old garden) by some of the old people, and was given to the Church by a pious lady.

According to the old Ordnance Survey map of 1827, the main entrance to the Priory was on the west side, close to the present west iron gateway of the Churchyard. This has been verified by the

The basement of the present house built on rock is the remains of the old Benedictine Priory. The walls are 2' 7" thick on the south front and 2' 8" thick on the east side.

The seven windows (S. and E.) in this basement are all round arched; in the new part of the house, all windows being pointed or square headed. This would indicate that the Priory was built before 1125. The room facing S. with three south windows and one east (window 3' 1" high by 3' 4" wide) is undoubtedly the old refectory, size 26' x 18"; one should here notice the old chimney place.

Behind the refectory on the east side of the house one comes to the old buttery with one window 3' 2" high by 3' 8" wide, with a cellar adjoining, with one east window 3' 2" x 3' 2".

circular stone stairway lit by a small window on the south-west, opening on to one of the main windows in the house, and in all probability the ancient stairway; during the time the Priory was owned by Mr. Miles this stairway was altered in the upper portion, and the upper door placed to the north, instead of the east, as can still be seen.

The lower steps of this stairway were recut seven years ago, being so worn in the centre as to be dangerous.

North of this again is the old kitchen, with one window to the east, 3' 4" high  $\times$  3' 6½" wide, with door to the north opening out into garden, till seven years ago, by a sloping path, now by steps; the concreting and cementing of the floors was also done in 1897, owing to water coming into the house at the spring tides. Formerly there were very much worn and broken old flags.

On the west and north side of the old kitchen are three old cellars, the west one vaulted, and there was also a very large old slate water-cistern in the recess of the north cellar in 1897.

Two old wells have also been found in the Priory grounds, one being only discovered about thirty years ago on the present lawn, about half way between the river and the pampas grass, through a cart breaking into it, and was filled in by order of Mr. Jenkins, agent to Mr. Miles, when he rented the Priory.

120 CARDIGAN PRIORY

The second well adjoined the cow-shed on the north in the stable yard, and was also filled in by Mr. Jenkins, on account of the water being unfit to drink. This sealed and rimmed well was discovered a year ago by Mr. Pritchard, when making some alterations, and was seen by all his family, servants and labourers.

The Priory evidently decreased in size and importance after the reign of Henry VI., perchance through the monks taking the side of Henry of Lancaster (as evidenced by the head of Margaret of Anjou supporting the north side of the old chancel arch in the Priory Church of St. Mary's). As in Henry VIII.'s time there were but two monks, according to Leland.

On what is now the embankment in the time when Mr. Miles owned the Priory Mr. Harry Miles picked up two cannon balls, these cannon balls are declared to have been fired from the cannons of Cromwell's army when they were attacking Cardigan Castle, which they are reported to have left in ruins—and which was still in ruins in 1804, see Malkin.

and from his grandson, in 1897, to the present owner, John W. Pritchard.

Meyrick in his "Cardiganshire" (1810) states, P. 46: "Cardigan Coll. Patron Saint April 25": On p. 100 is a copy of Giraldus; p. 104 states that "Cardigan Priory, when cell to Chertsey, was valued at £13 4s. 9d."

Tanner's "Notitia Monasticon"—same as above. 1789

With reference to this statement of Dugdale, there must be a slight error, as Malkin speaks of Mr. Bowen owning the Priory in 1804, the date of the publishing of his "Scenery, Antiquities and Biographies of South Wales;" and an old resident* in Cardigan says "that his father always told him that Mr. Bowen built the present house on the basement walls of the old Priory, 1808,—John Nash, who built the Quadrant in Regent Street, London, being the architect. By the Corporation Book Mr. Bowen died in 1809.

Malkin says: "There was formerly a priory Malkin, here; and the delightful vicinity of the river side 1804, still retains something of a venerable aspect. The p. 410 well-selected seat of the monks is at present occupied by an elegant villa (?), commanding the first reach of the Tivy, with its bold scenery towards Kilgerran. Its present occupant is Mr. Bowen, a very respectable gentleman, brother to the most assiduous agriculturalist in the county, the Rev. Mr. Bowen of Troedryaur. But this spot has attained a high celebrity, and cannot fail to interest every visitor, from the circumstance of its having been the residence of Orinda."

Mr. Bowen of Troedryaur was a pluralist and a very wealthy man.

Dugdale's "Monasticon Anglicanum"
(ed. 1817), Vol. IV. 584, Benedictine cell of Cardigan, states that "Near the east end of the Church of Cardigan stood the Priory, a small convent of black monks, cell to the abbey of Chertsey in Surrey. By whom it was founded we are not told ; but it existed certainly as early as 1291." (Here in a note—"Prior de Kardigan habet in villa de Kardigan duas carucas terras cum redditibus et aliis commoditatibus 2l 13s. 4d. Taxat P. Nich. IV. Meneven Dioc. p. 276 b.") Leland mentions it, in his time, as inhabited by two monks only (Leland, Itin., Vol. V. p. 14).

John Barnet was appointed prior of this house by the convent of Chertsey, in 1411. He resigned in 1434 : when

Tanner refers to Pat. 3 Hen. VI., Par. 1., m. 14, as relating to it. The whole revenues of this house, according to the Valor of the 26th Hen. VIII., amounted to 32*l.*; but, clear of reprises, to 13*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* only (See the Appendix, Number I.)

The site and possessions of this Priory were granted, as parcel of Chertsey, in the 29th Hen. VIII. to Bisham Abbey in Berkshire; and in the 31st Hen. VIII. to William Cavendishe (Orig. 31 Hen. VIII.) ; afterwards Sir William Cavendishe, by whom, in the 5th Edward VI., they were exchanged with that King, being then on lease to John Powell, gent. (See the extract from the Rental, Appendix, Number II.) From this time the Priorylands remained in the Crown until the 14th of James I., when they were granted to George Phelips, Esq., his heirs and assigns for ever. (See the extract from the Fee Farm Deeds, Augmentation Office, Appendix, Number III.)

By the Proceedings in Chancery, in the case of Lloyd and Johnes, it appears that in 1744 Thomas Pryse, Esq., being possessed of the Gogerthan and Priory estates here, devised the same by will to trustees for a long term of years upon trust, to sell for payment of debts, and subject thereto to his son, John Pugh Pryse, for life, and afterwards entailed them strictly upon his issue. Thomas Pryse died in John Pugh Pryce died a bachelor in 1774; and, after his death, the Priory estate was sold, with the residue of the term of seven hundred years, to Thomas Johnes, Esq. (Meyrick's "Cardigan," p. 103), the father of the late Thomas Johnes, Esq. of Hafod, the translator of Froissart. The last Mr. Johnes disposed of this estate some years ago to the late Marquis of Lansdowne; but the purchase not being completed, it was sold to Richard Hart Davies, Esq., the present owner. So far there is no trace of the spot where Christ's Church stood as mentioned in the examination of Prior Hore, nor is there any trace of St. Peter's de Castello, both of which Churches were served by the Benedictines from the Priory—though many bones were dug up years ago to the north end of the Castle ; they were not, however, examined at the time, so that there is nothing to prove whether it was the old Churchyard of St. Peter's Church that was disturbed, or only some of those who fell in the many fights around the Castle.

BERNARD by the grace of God bishop of the church of St. Davids To the Lords, his Arch-deacon, and all others attached to the church of St. Davids, health and blessing.

Know that I by the concession and presentation of Earl Gilbert fitz Richard have conceded and by my episcopal authority have confirmed to the Abbot and monks of Gloucester the church of the Holy Trinity of Cardigan, with lands, tithes and all things pertaining to it, all which Edward the Presbyter held and we have freed the same Edward from the cure of the same and have given the advowson of the said church to the said monks and have inducted them into the same church, with the benedictions of God and ours. And we have conceded to them full authority and lordship, saving only our episcopal dignity. And if any one under my authority wishes to give any church tithes, or any other ecclesiastical possessions to the said monks I hereby give them the power of doing so and the church of Gloucester the power of receiving the same. With the blessing of God and our own. Farewell.

Charter of Roger de Clare, Earl of Hereford, concerning the Confirmation of the gift of Cardigan Church. A.D.

To T. (Theobald) by the grace of God archbishop Primate of England and Legate of the Apostolic See Roger de Clare Earl of Hereford, greeting. I make known to you that the Abbot and monks of Chertsey before my first coming into my land of Wales came to me and shewed me that I had a certain church at Cardigan dedicated to the Holy Trinity which they asserted they ought justly to have and which was then vacant. I deeming that it was, as they shewed me, conceded to them the church and confirmed my Charter. Afterwards came the monks of Gloucester shewing me deed of gift and confirmation of my brother and my ancestors, and pleading for my charter of gift and confirmation as they had them from my ancestors. Wherefore I command and require you that if the abbot of Chertsey or the monks come to you and require a confirmation of the said church that it in no wise be done for them; nor let there be any impediment to the monks of Gloucester possessing it as is just. For I am unwilling to put any hindrance to the gifts which my ancestors gave in their times in pure alms.
And if anything was done before the monks of Gloucester came into my presence with their deeds
it shall not stand. (No date.)

Restitution of the Church of Cardigan by T. Archbishop. (In red ink.)

T.* by the Grace of God archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of England and legate of the Apostolic see, to David† by the same grace bishop of St. Davids, Greeting. We would have our fraternity know that the abbot and monks of Chertsey came with false suggestion to Roger, earl of Hereford before his first (?) Lord lieutenaney in Wales urging that he had in his gift a certain church at Cardigan, namely the church of the Holy Trinity which at that time, as they asserted, was vacant, and which, they said justly belonged to them. The aforesaid Earl therefore giving credence to their statement and listening favourably to their entreaties, confirmed the said church to them by his deed and seal. Later on however came the monks of Gloucester, declaring the illegality of the whole transaction and laying before him the deed of gift to them of his brother, and the confirmation of it by Bernard‡ our venerable brother, and your predecessor. Whereupon they besought him that he would at once re-confirm the donation and confirmation of his ancestors. The Earl now realizing the falsehoods of the monks of Chertsey, and their exposure by the monks of Gloucester made restitution ; and assuring us of his regret, implored us to revoke his gift and give commands to our fraternity to that effect. Wherefore we bid you on no occasion to receive the monks of Chertsey into the said church and if they or any others, on behalf of them, venture to intrude ye are to eject them. And ye are to reinstate the said monks into the aforesaid church of the Holy Trinity and all that pertains to it without any contradiction or vexation. We also having seen the authentic deeds of confirmation of King Henry, of Bishop Bernard, and Earl Gilbert fitz Richard, have confirmed the said church to the monks of Gloucester by the authority vested in me.

* The period to which I have assigned this charter (A.D. 1115-1147) is that of Bernard, Bishop of St. David's, the only witness specified; but in the "Calendar of Donations" (ante, vol. i. p. 106) this grant is said to have been made in the year 1111 (Hart). The Brut y Tywysogion states Bernard was Bishop of St. Davids in 1112.
